GAETANO MEROLA

Opera lovers hold the name of Gaetano Merola in grateful regard, for it is mainly due to his vision, organizing powers, and untiring labors that San Francisco has been restored to her traditional place with the opera producing cities of the world. As General Director of the San Francisco Opera Company, since its inception in 1923, Mr. Merola has guided the artistic affairs of the company with the hand of genius, realizing successfully the city's long cherished dream of producing locally maintained grand opera of metropolitan standards. Himself, a prominent figure in opera, he has brought to San Francisco the world's greatest singers in performances which have delighted almost a half-million people and have spread the fame of our music loving city all over the world wherever music is heard.

When you cannot use your Season Tickets

If it should happen that you are prevented from using your season seat for any performance, do not let the ticket go to waste. There are many deserving music students who would appreciate the opportunity to attend the opera but who cannot afford to do so. The Women's Auxiliary of the San Francisco Opera Association has a list of such students by whom seats would be much appreciated. When you cannot use your ticket telephone to Miss Edith Livermore, PRospect 2624, Mrs. M. S. Koshland, BAyview 3836, or Mrs. Leonard E. Wood, SKyline 6272, and they will see that it gets into the hands of an appreciative guest.

MANON—Continued

Act II—Boudoir in Manon's house, Paris.

Des Grieux and Manon are living in an apartment in Paris. Des Grieux writes for his father's consent to his marriage with Manon (On l'appelle Manon—She is called Manon) and goes out to post the letter.

The capricious Manon having found that the modest style of their menage hardly agrees with her ideas, listens to the advances made to her by a nobleman named Bretigny, and ends by conniving in a scheme, planned by the elder des Grieux, for carrying off the son from his questionable surroundings. However, she cannot leave without regret (Adieu notre petite table—Farewell, our little table), for she knows how sincerely des Grieux loves her; and when he returns from posting the letter to his father and tells her his dream (Le Reve—The Dream) it is with heavy heart that she thinks of their separation.

Act III—Ante-room in Seminary of Saint Sulpice.

Manon, as the mistress of Bretigny, is admired and feted. During an entertainment she has overheard a conversation between Bretigny and the elder des Grieux, from which she learned that the latter's son is a novice at Saint Sulpice, and seized with a sudden return of her old love she has hastened to the Seminary. After a passionate interview (Obeissons quand leur—Hear the Voice of Youth) (Ah! fuyez, douce image! Dispar, vision—Depart, Fair Vision) she persuades des Grieux to flee from the Seminary with her.

Act IV—Hotel of Transylvanie.

That Manon may have her love and still satisfy her craving for luxury, she persuades des Grieux to gamble. In a fashionable gambling house he wins from Guillot who revenges himself by denouncing des Grieux as a cheat and Manon as an accomplice. Des Grieux and Manon are arrested. The former is freed through his father's influence, but Manon is sentenced to exile.

Act V.—Road to Havre.

On her way to the ship for deportation to America, Manon, exhausted by ill-treatment and illness, dies in des Grieux's arms (Manon, Tu Piangi?—Manon, Thou Weepest?).

Scene—A great terrace of the Palace of Herod, A. D. 30.

On a terrace of Herod's palace, guards are keeping watch while the King makes revel within. Narraboth comments on the beauty of the Princess Salomé and is warned by his friend, the officer of the guard, that it is not safe to look so much at her. As they speak, Salomé, tired of the banquet, comes into the garden. She hears Jochanaan's voice in the cistern and demands that the prisoner be brought out so that she may see him. The guards refuse, but Narraboth cannot long resist when she wheedles him, and her cry—Thou wilt do this thing for me—is carried to his love-mad brain by a voluptuous glissando of the harp which is as irresistible as her glance and smile.

SALOMÉ—Continued

When they bring Jochanaan from the cistern Salomé falls in love with him. Her amorous advances bring the prophet's curses on her head. He descends again into the cistern, and Narraboth, crazed by what he has witnessed, kills himself.

Herod comes into the garden and bids Salomé dance, which she refuses to do until he promises to give her whatever she shall ask at the conclusion of the dance. (Krehbiel described the dance music.)

"The dance employs a vast apparatus, but the Oriental color impressed upon it at the outset by oboe and tambour remains as persistent as its rhythmical figure, which seems to have been invented to mark the sinuous flexure of the spine and the swaying of the hips of the dancer. The entire army of brass instruments is muted. Startling effects are obtained by a confusion of keys, confusion of rhythms, sudden contrasts from an overpowering tutti to the stridulous whirring of empty fifths on the violins, a trill on the flutes, or a dissonant mutter of the basses. The celesta, an instrument with keyboard and bell tone contributing fascinating effects, and the xylophone, are used; utterances that are lascivious, as well as others that are macabre. Dissonance runs riot and frequently carries the imagination away completely captive."

The reward Salomé claims is the head of Jochanaan. Herod, horrified, begs release from his promise. He describes the jewels he will give to her if she will relieve him of his oath—and the music of the orchestra glints and glistens with a hundred prismatic tints. Salomé will not be dissuaded from her desire. (Again Krehbiel is quoted.)

"Strauss strikes off the head of Jochanaan with more thunderous noise upon the kettle-drums than Wagner uses when Fafner pounds the life out of Fasolt with his gigantic stave; but there is nothing in all of Wagner's tragic pages to compare in tenseness of feeling with the moment of suspense while Salomé is peering into the cistern and marveling that she hears no sound of a death struggle. At this moment there comes an uncanny sound from the orchestra that is positively blood-curdling. The multitude of instruments are silent—all but the string basses. Some of them maintain a tremelo on the deep E Flat. Suddenly there comes a short high B Flat. Again and again with more rapid iteration. Such a voice was never heard in orchestra before. It accomplishes a fearful accentuation of the awful situation. This is unquestionably the greatest triumph of reflection and ingenuity of contrivance that the literature of music can show."

In the final scene Salomé receives the head of Jochanaan from the executioner. With abandon she pours out her amorousness for the white flesh of Jochanaan; but when she kisses the lifeless lips, Herod can stand no more and at his command the guards crush the ghoulis princess under their shields.

ACTION—WITH MUSIC HIGHLIGHTS

Prelude—Soft, tranquil harmonies, and haunting, passionate melody, portraying the conflicting moods of the opera.

Act I—A Hall in Violetta's home.

In Violetta's salon gay Paris is gathered. A spirited drinking song—Libiamo ne lieti (A bumper we'll drain)—is led by Alfredo, a new-comer. As the guests leave the room for dancing Violetta is attacked by faintness, and Alfredo remains with her. Together—in the beautiful duet, Un di felice (Rapturous moment)—they tell of their sudden overwhelming love. When the last guest has gone Violetta surrenders herself to the wonder of Alfredo's unselfish love—in three beautiful arias, E Strano (T'is strange), Ah, for's e liu ('Twas he, perchance), and Sempre Libera (The round of pleasure).

Act II—Country home near Paris.

Violetta has given up her gay life and is living in idyllic happiness with Alfredo who tells of his own rapture in Dei miei bollenti spiriti (Wild my dream).

Alfredo has never questioned the source of their funds and is shocked when Annina divulges the sale of Violetta's jewels for their expenses—O mio rimorso (Oh, dark remorse). Conscience stricken he secretly departs for Paris to obtain funds.

The elder Germont comes to the house and persuades Violetta to leave Alfredo so that his younger sister's marriage to a noble may not be jeopardised. The father describes his daughter in Pura siccome un angelo (Pure as an angel), and Violetta responds with Dite alla giovine (Say to thy daughter), and Imponete (Now command me). As Violetta writes her farewell to Alfredo, he returns. She conceals the note, sending it back later as she journeys to Paris "to resume her old life." The father tries to console his son and pleads with him to return home—Di provenza il mar (From fair Provence's soil and sea). Alfredo's heart is too sore. He rushes off to Paris determined to put Violetta out of his mind.

Act III—A Hall in Flora's Palace.

Gypsies, matadors, and picadors are entertaining Flora's gambling guests. Noi siamo zingarelle (We're gypsies, gay and youthful), and E Piquillo un bel gagliardo ('Twas Piquillo, so young and so daring). Alfredo arrives, immediately followed by Violetta and Baron Dauphol to whom she has attached herself in agreement with her pledge to Alfredo's father, that she would discourage his son by returning to her old life. The Baron gambles with Alfredo and is shamefully beaten. On the announcement of supper Violetta remains behind to urge Alfredo to leave. He asks her if the Baron has taken his place, and when she admits that he has, Alfredo, enraged, denounces her—Questa donna conoscete (Know ye all this woman?). He casts at her feet her portrait he has carried and the purse he has won. Violetta faints. Alfredo's father, entering, is horrified by the situation he has brought about. In the great finale of the act he tells his son of Violetta's sacrifice—Alfredo, di questo core (Alfred, thou knowest not).

Act IV—Violetta's bed room.

Violetta is dying. A letter comes from Alfredo's father that Alfredo is on his way for her forgiveness, and he, himself, to give her his thanks. She fears it is too late—that they cannot arrive in time. Addio del passato (Farewell to bright visions). But love has hastened Alfredo and in each other's arms they pledge themselves once more—in a duet of poignant delicacy, Parigi, o cara (Far from gay Paris). Overcome by joy, Violetta collapses in her lover's arms—dead.

THIS is the heyday of big business . . . a maddening rush permeates our lives. Yet, when surrounded by music, that voice of romance, we recall the glorious glamour of days gone by. In the Baldwin Piano-forte there is that richness of tone, that true precision which lights the way to a clear projection of romantic imagery upon the mind's eye. And these fine qualities have been attained only through the knowledge and experience gained during two generations of piano building enterprise. Baldwin Grand Pianos are priced from $1450.

ACTION—WITH MUSIC HIGHLIGHTS

Act I—The Polka Bar, California in 1849.

Miners are gathered at the Polka Bar which is run by Minnie, the orphaned daughter of the founder of the establishment. There are singing and card games, and one man is sent off in disgrace for cheating. The men drink a toast to Minnie, to which the sheriff, Jack Rance, adds, "Soon to be Mrs. Rance." The men will not drink to the toast and start a brawl which is broken up by the entrance of Minnie who is as quick with the gun as any of the men. Rance clumsily proposes to Minnie who re-

The PERFECT CELLAR

No one can be a perfect host without possessing a perfect cellar. Happily this Utopia is within the reach of all of us.

The Perfect Cellar, you know, is one that is generously filled with Asti Colony Juices of the Grape. Years of experience have taught the Italian Swiss Colony, the producer of these juices, the secrets of the fruit of the vine. In these juices will be found the perfect flavor and bouquet of rare old vintages, which only years of technical knowledge and the art of blending can produce.

These juices, which are sold in the choicest varieties . . . (Tipo Red, Tipo White, Burgundy, Port, Sherry and Muscatel) . . . are stocked by thousands of Bay Region home owners who testify that their home beverages compare favorably with those of the good old days.

To be in step with the modern age, send for an Italian Swiss Colony Cellar Builder. Telephone GARfield 3546 today for one to call.

fuses him because she must wait for a love like her mother's for her father—of which she sings. A "stranger, who seems like a San Franciscan" but announces himself as "Dick Johnson from Sacramento," enters as she sings. Once on the road to Monterey Minnie had met this stranger and she vouches for him now over Rance's protest. The newcomer is teaching Minnie to dance when Ashby, the Wells Fargo Agent, calls the miners outside to join in the chase for Ramerrez, leader of an outlaw Mexican band that has been terrorizing the country. Castro, one of the Mexican's followers, has been captured and he promises to lead the men to the outlaw's hiding place; and when Castro speaks to Johnson on the side we realize that Johnson is the outlaw. Johnson remains behind with Minnie. She shows him the miners' gold entrusted to her care, and she explains how much it means to them, and to what lengths she would go to protect it for them. Then they talk of love—until a whistle from Castro warns Johnson that he must leave.

Act II—Minnie's Cabin.

An hour later Minnie is excitedly preparing for a promised visit from Johnson, who renews his ardent lovemaking as soon as he arrives. Time passes quickly. He discovers it is late and starts to leave but three pistol shots send him back into the cabin. Minnie says that it is probably only Ramerrez, but she feels that it will be better for Johnson to stay. She gives him her bed, while she rolls up in a skin on the floor in front of the fire. Through the storm outside they hear voices calling. Minnie admits the men (Johnson is hidden by the bed curtains) and hears from them that Johnson is Ramerrez and that he had been identified through a portrait in the possession of his sweetheart Nina Micheltorena. The men leave, and Johnson appears, wretched. He tries to explain his life—Or son sei mesi (Six months ago)—but Minnie cannot forgive him, as a bandit, for having taken her first kiss, and she sends him off to almost certain death. As he steps out of the door he is shot. Minnie drags him inside and is just able to conceal him in the rafters when Rance enters. Minnie convinces Rance that Johnson is not in the house—when blood dropping on Rance's hand proves him there. Rance would take him off but Minnie proposes to play cards with Rance, winning Johnson for herself, or losing herself to Rance. By cheating, Minnie wins, and Rance leaves.

Act III—A California Forest.

Rance kept his pledge to Minnie, but Ashby has tracked the outlaw, and the scene opens with a group waiting in the woods to lynch Johnson. When the outlaw arrives, Rance will not let the men hang him at once but jealously taunts him. Johnson begs them never to let Minnie know of his lynching—Ch'ella mi creda libero (Let her believe). The delay is fortunate, for Minnie arrives. First she threatens the men with her pistol. Then she throws the pistol away and wins the men over one by one, recalling the closeness of their friendships. In the end she wins and goes off with Johnson, leaving the unhappy miners behind.

I your piano as an Investment few people seem to look forward to the day when the new pianos they are buying will become old instruments. Steinways, after years of use, have been sold for practically as much as they originally cost. ★ Any Steinway bought today is a sound, practical investment. After two or three generations it will be the same high grade, fine toned instrument. Why not make the purchase of your piano an investment.

You may pay for your Steinway over a convenient period of years. Used pianos accepted in partial exchange. Prices: Uprights, $950 and up; grands from $1475.

ACTION—WITH MUSIC HIGHLIGHTS

Act I—Garret of the Bohemians, Paris, about 1830.

The four Bohemians live together in a sparsely furnished attic, sharing their poverty. Shivering, without fire, Rudolph burns his latest manuscript, act by act. They feast their eyes on the flames but gain scant warmth, until Schaunard, who has earned some money by teaching, arrives with wood, food, and wine in great plenty. The landlord disturbs their gaiety somewhat by coming with a demand for the rent; but they get rid of him by threatening to tell his wife of his amorous escapades. With what money Schaunard has left, the Bohemians, except Rudolph, go off to celebrate.

Left alone, Rudolph turns again to his writing, but is interrupted by a pretty young girl who occupies a room further up the staircase. Her candle has gone out; will monsieur give her a light? The gallant poet offers her a seat, and the girl, poor and underfed, sinks into it on the verge of fainting. A sip of wine restores her; she lights her candle and bids the poet good evening. But she is gone only a moment. She has dropped her key. The pair seek for it; the draft blows out the candle, and groping

SAN FRANCISCO

THE FAIRMONT

There must be a reason why people of wealth and position who have traveled widely and are accustomed to the best of service are almost unanimous in their choice of the aristocratic Nob Hill hotels when living in San Francisco.

There must also be a cause for the blithe way that exacting people desert their own cooks for the cuisine of the Mark Hopkins and the Fairmont Hotels — either for special entertaining or for day-to-day meals.

Perhaps it is the subtle temptation of the modern luxury with which each guest is surrounded that brings those who "know" to Nob Hill for the week-end, to spend the season or to make their home above the heart of the city.

in the dark their lips meet in a kiss. Rudolph is a poet; she shall be his muse. After a charming love scene into which Puccini has poured some of his most beautiful music—Racconto di Rodolfo (Rudolph's Narrative) and Mi chiamano (They call me Mimi)—the two set out to join the others at the Cafe Momus.

Act II—Terrace of the Cafe Momus.

The group dining together is full of gaiety. Only Marcel is out of spirits, for on the other side of the street he spies his fickle lady, the dainty Musetta, with an elderly roue. Musetta sings her tuneful Waltz Song to attract Marcel's attention. Then she feigns a cramp in her foot and hurries Alcindoro off to get her a new shoe. The Bohemians carry the shoeless Musetta off in triumph and when the elderly lover returns there is no one to welcome him but the waiter with the bill.

Act III—A City Gate of Paris.

Early morning in snow covered Paris finds Marcel and Musetta in altercation outside the inn where she gives music lessons. Rudolph comes with a tale of woe about Mimi. They are miserably poor and he knows that her life is being eaten away by illness. Mimi e una Civetta (Mimi's a heartless maiden). Mimi steals in, unseen, and overhears him. When he sees her—Mimi, io son? (Mimi, thou here?). There are words of tenderness and regret. The two agree to part—Addio (Farewell), and the quartet, Addio, dolce svegliare (Farewell, Sweet Love).

Act IV—Same as Act I.

Once again the four Bohemians are gathered in the attic room, amusing themselves with music, dancing, and jokes. Marcel and Rudolph are regretting Musetta and Mimi—Ah Mimi te piu (Mimi, False One). Musetta enters; Mimi is near, but so ill she cannot climb the stairs. Rudolph rushes out after her and lays her on the bed. There is tender reconciliation between the lovers while the doctor is sent for. Colline sells his treasured coat to pay for medicine—Vecchia Zimarra (Farewell, old coat). The little figure on the bed feigns sleep so that all will leave her but Rudolph—Sono andati? (Have they gone?). Musetta offers a tender prayer to the Madonna, but it is too late, Mimi is dead. Oh Dio, Mimi (Oh God! Mimi) cries Rudolph.

Scene I—Room in a country house.

The boy has been lazy and his mother has left him in his room in disgrace. He flies into a temper, tears up his books, pulls down the tapestry, and even hits his tame squirrel. He must be punished. So the armchair tilts him out, the tapestry shepherdesses scold, the Fire darts at him, the Princess of his torn fairytale book reproaches him, and the figures of his arithmetic dance around and torment him. The teapot and the china cup dance a fox trot.

Scene II—A Garden.

The child runs into the garden. The dragonflies scold him. His squirrel abuses him from a tree. The night creatures decide to punish him but first become involved in a quarrel among themselves. They injure the squirrel—and when the boy binds up his pet's hurt paw, the creatures decide that he is not entirely naughty. They make friends with him again. Mother is won back, and all is peace.

ACTION—WITH MUSIC HIGHLIGHTS

Prelude—A noble orchestral review of the main themes.

Act I, Scene 1—House of Peter, the Broom-maker.

Haensel and Gretel dance and sing—Suse, liebe Suse—forgetting their work. Their mother comes home and angrily chases them out into the forest to pick berries. The father returns from town. Where are the children? In the forest! The anxious father hurries out. Perhaps the children have strayed to the Ilsenstein, where the wicked Witch bakes innocent children into gingerbread.

Orchestral Interlude—The Witch's Dance.

Act I, Scene 2—In the Woods.

While Haensel gathers Strawberries, Gretel twines floral wreaths and sings Ein Mannlich steht im Walde (A little man in the woods). A basketfull gathered, the children sit down and eat them all.

Act II, Scene 1—In the Woods.

Night falls and the children are frightened until the Sleep Fairy comes to lull their fears—Der kleine Sandman bin ich (I am the Sleep Fairy). Abendgebot—Evening hymn, When at night we go to sleep, fourteen angels watch do keep.

Act II, Scene 2—The Witch's house.

The Dawn-Fairy awakens them and they see the Witch's hut. Up comes the old hag and bans them with her magic wand. Haensel is to be fattened, Gretel must help the Witch. The Witch is heating the oven when Gretel, who has heard the magic spell, repeats it, and shoves her in. The gingerbread children all come back to life.

Yours... 16 days of gracious living to New York

via Panama Canal and Havana

GAY, happy days to spend on these great electric vibrationless ships—largest ever built in America.

You'll speed along the coasts of Old Mexico and Central America. You'll thrill to historic Panama and for eight daylight hours pass thru the mammoth Panama Canal. . . . Then ancient Morro

Castle and fascinating Havana, "Paris of the Caribbean."

. . . Broad spacious decks await your sports or promenade. . . . at night beneath a tropic moon—dancing. Two outdoor pools tempt even the most unenthusiastic swimmer.

Or, if you will, just rest to your heart's content. Famous cuisine, courteous attendants . . . afford you greater pleasure.

PORTION OF NEW CANOPY IN CIVIC AUDITORIUM

The beautiful new canopy in the Civic Auditorium was designed, constructed and installed by the J. L. STUART MANUFACTURING COMPANY and is without doubt the largest hand-painted canvas canopy ever made.

For the past eight seasons we have supplied and installed the Proscenium Arch, Gridiron Rigging, Masking Curtains, and done much other important work for the San Francisco Opera.

Our services and experience always willingly at the disposal of anyone interested in decorations or similar equipment, the rental of large tents for shows, meetings, fetes, etc.

We also specialize in

AWNINGS for Residences, Stores or Buildings :: :: CANOPIES
TENTS of All Kinds :: PORCH CURTAINS :: CANVAS WORK

Estimates, designs and samples of materials gladly submitted.
 Our service and workmanship always satisfy.
