What Car Belongs Here?

Not many people would hesitate in naming the car they feel belongs in that inviting driveway.

It's the entrance to a fine American home, with a tradition of gracious living behind its handsome pillars—and the car which so obviously belongs before it is a Cadillac.

But here is a fact which it is important to remember—a Cadillac likewise belongs in the driveways of millions of other far more modest American homes. For it is practical, as well as thrilling, to own a Cadillac.

Listen, if you doubt it, to these amazing and significant facts:

—there are twenty-two models of other American motor cars which cost more than the lowest-priced Cadillac!

—a Cadillac will actually run farther on a gallon of gasoline than numerous cars which are built and sold primarily for economy!

—a Cadillac is so dependable that it is just as economical to service and maintain as any car you could buy.

—and, finally, a Cadillac may be expected to return a greater percentage of its cost at the time of resale than any other car built in America.

In view of these significant facts, don't you think you should consider a Cadillac for your driveway?

Better come in today. We'll gladly give you the facts and a demonstration.

The Story of "The Creatures of Prometheus"

NOTE: The Greeks thought that the beneficent Titan, Prometheus, was punished by Zeus for his theft of fire. A ballet on the subject of this myth was first performed in Vienna in 1801. Tonight's restoration of the Beethoven-Vigano romantic masterpiece tells the following story:

PROMETHEUS, although warned by Zeus, touched his creatures with stolen fire, which action was a kind of ennobling bestowal. But Man and Woman were still giftless—that is, they were without feelings or capabilities of accomplishment. Their creator was so discouraged that he thought of destroying them. Counseled by Athena to ask the gods to instruct them, he secured for Man and Woman a host of heavenly tutors: Apollo and his court, gods, goddesses and Muses.

FIRST, smiling Terpsichore taught them movement and the lovely science of dancing. Aphrodite descended then, preceded by her young son and guarded by her symbols. Apollo and others partnering her in an erotic dance, she taught the creatures Love.

IN ORDER that they might know suffering, the dark Melpomene instructed them in this fashion: she had a tragic story enacted for them, the story of a willful queen who murders her consort. Acting in the tragedy, Melpomene herself was moved to tears; she wept into her mantle and gave the creatures the gift of her own compassionate crystal teardrops.

THALIA, forever young and joyous, brought them the antithesis of tears; she taught them merriment.

THEN leering young Bacchus, with his court of sileni and wanton bacchantes, added to their gifts that of intemperate joy.

NOW, whether made foolish by Bacchus, or touched to madness by Zeus, who would punish him, Prometheus became vainglorious. In a celebration that was like a recapitulation of the gifts so ceremoniously given, he boasted of his creation in a manner that was an offense to Zeus. Athena tried to stay him, but even the menacing vision of the great god did not stop his revels.

THE growing anger of Zeus gave the creatures their final lesson—that of fear of the gods. The only one who had refused to learn the lesson, Prometheus, was punished by being chained to a rock in the Caucasus forever.

The Story of "Elektra"

NOTE: Queen Klytemnestra and her paramour, Aegisthus, have murdered the noble King Agamemnon. Wishing not to be bothered with him when he becomes old enough to think and act for himself, the Queen has sent her boy, Orestes, into exile. Her two daughters, Elektra and Chrysothemis, she treats shamefully, making them live with the servants and perform humiliating duties.

THE OPERA begins with the comments of the servants on Elektra's hardships which they deeply deplore. Elektra appears, thinking of her noble father. She sings of his glory and predicts the day of vengeance. The gentle Chrysothemis comes to tell her that the Queen and her lover have plotted to throw Elektra into prison. Elektra is defiant but Chrysothemis says that it is better to die than live as she is living. Elektra rebukes her.

THE QUEEN appears and converses with Elektra. The latter hides her bitterness under sweet words. The Queen confesses that she is miserable. At night she cannot rest, she shudders, because of horrible dreams. She hopes that Elektra can tell her of some cure. The daughter does tell her of a cure—the spilling of a woman's blood. All anxious, the Queen demands to know what woman should be slain. But Elektra is evasive. She declares further that the rite shall be performed by a man, a stranger, yet of their house. Then she turns on her mother and boldly predicts that she, the Queen, will be the murdered one. The Queen is terrified by this sinister outburst from her daughter.

NOW CHRYSOTHEMIS comes weeping to Elektra. An old man and a youth have arrived at the palace, she tells her, with news of the death of their brother, Orestes. Elektra will not believe the tidings. But she determines that now she and her sister must be the avengers of their father's murder. The gentle sister, however, refuses to aid Elektra in killing their mother. Elektra launches into a wild, unholy praise of her sister that frightens the girl.

THE YOUTH who has brought the tidings of Orestes' death comes upon the passionate Elektra creeping around the wall. Elektra denounces him for not giving up his life to save that of Orestes. But soon she discovers that the youth is none other than Orestes, himself. Elektra is beside herself with joy. Then, in a sudden burst of terrific passion, she tells him how the crime of her mother has obsessed her. Orestes is eager to avenge the crime. Elektra joyfully awaits the final moment.

THE YOUTH enters the palace and there is a scream from the Queen. She has gone to her death at the hands of her avenging son. Meeting Aegisthus, Elektra, with mock courtesy, leads him to his doom. Inside the palace the servants and retainers who side with Orestes battle with the supporters of Aegisthus. Orestes is victorious and his mother's lover is slain. Elektra, dancing wildly in her joy and passion, falls senseless as the curtain drops on the horrible, unholy tragedy.

A Famous First in California!

With the opera season in San Francisco making its 1953 debut, we turn back the pages of musical history for a famous first.

Back in the winter of eighteen-fifty-two, San Francisco was a rough and tough frontier. All the great singers of the East coast scornfully ignored this unrefined outpost. That is . . . all but one. On a cold rainy day just over one hundred years ago, she stepped timidly from the steamer, a petite, dark-eyed girl with a coloratura voice that was to thrill the San Francisco audience at her very first concert. From her, the city's musical reputation got its start. Her name was Elisa Biscaccianti. They called her the "American Thrush" . . . and she was the first great singer ever to visit the San Francisco Bay Area.

It was just eighteen years later, in 1870, that Crocker First National Bank was founded . . . the first and oldest national bank in California.
