Lincoln Continental for 1966:
unmistakably new, yet unmistakably Continental

With the newly styled sedan and four-door convertible there is a new Lincoln Continental model for 1966: the Continental coupé, making America's most distinguished motorcar available to more fine car buyers than ever before. Discover for yourself how close you may be to owning a Lincoln Continental.

One look tells you Continental styling is new, totally new from the dynamic front grille to the graceful contours of the rear design. And yet you know that this new styling is a contemporary expression of the continuing Continental look. All three new models are distinctively Lincoln Continental. Each is built to the highest standards in the world and tested more thoroughly than any other car.

Inside Continental, you will find increased spaciousness; more head room, more shoulder room, more trunk space.

New reserves of power are yours to command in the Lincoln

Continental. There is a new high-performance 462 cubic inch engine and an all-new transmission. Together, they provide an even smoother flow of power.

In addition to an impressive list of standard equipment, Continental offers innovations in luxury options. For example, there is an all-new Stereo-Sonic Tape System/AM radio. Simply put in a cartridge and four-speaker stereo sound is yours. And there is the new temperature control system that automatically maintains the temperature you select, regardless of changes in the weather outside.

Come take a closer look at Continental for 1966. Accept your Continental dealer's invitation to drive it, experience it, and to discover how easy it can be to own a Lincoln Continental.

 LINCOLN Continental

America's most distinguished motorcar.

YOUR WAR MEMORIAL CENTER FOR THE ARTS

On Election Day, November 2, the people of San Francisco will be given the opportunity to decide their city's cultural future by approving Proposition B, the War Memorial Center Bond Issue.

The War Memorial Opera House is a source of pride to the citizens of this community, for it houses those institutions which have made this city one of America's great cultural centers. But facilities of the Opera House are obsolete and hardly in keeping with today's requirements for a great opera company. Rehearsal space is limited to a point where additional space must be rented, at great expense and often in inconvenient locations; facilities for scenic construction and storage are inadequate; office space is so restricted that much of the staff must work in converted closets; stage equipment is outmoded. In short, the present-day needs of the San Francisco Opera, as well as of the Symphony and Ballet, have far outgrown the possibilities of the existing plant.

Added facilities — in the form of a new musical arts building — and extensive renovation of existing facilities are requisites for the maintenance of the Opera's high standards. Expansion is a necessity, not only to satisfy the increasing demands of this city's population, but as well for successful competition with other cities, whose artistic and economic growth have been impressively accelerated in the past decade by the construction of new Centers to house their cultural institutions.

If San Francisco does not continue to grow as a cultural center, then it must regress. Approval of the War Memorial Cultural Center Bond Issue is an investment in tomorrow, a promise of continued cultural leadership.

The Story of "DON GIOVANNI"

ACT I, Scene 1—After Leporello has commented on his unenviable job of being servant to such a precocious master as Don Giovanni, the sounds of a struggle are heard. The Don has forced his way into Donna Anna's chambers. She screams for help as she attempts to discover the identity of her attacker. Her cries are heard by her father, the Commendatore, who attempts to aid her but is killed by Don Giovanni. The Don and Leporello leave the scene. Meanwhile, the servants find Don Ottavio, Donna Anna's fiancé, and bring him to the scene. Ottavio and Anna swear vengeance on the unknown assassin.

Scene 2—Leporello berates his master for leading a scandalous life. Don Giovanni changes the subject to women and is cut short by the approach of a former love, Donna Elvira, who bemoans her fate, vowing to find the villain who deserted her. The Don, not recognizing her, offers his sympathy. She recognizes him and he rushes off. Leporello then recounts to her his master's many, many conquests, and leaves the scene. We next meet a group of peasants who are celebrating the impending marriage of Zerlina and Masetto. Don Giovanni introduces himself to the young couple and has Leporello lead Masetto away. The Don takes the coy Zerlina aside telling her that she is too good for such an oaf as Masetto and that he will marry her himself. The Don succeeds in impressing the girl, but then Donna Elvira appears and takes Zerlina away from him. Donna Anna and Don Ottavio now enter. Not yet realizing that it is Don Giovanni who has killed her father, Anna begs his aid in finding the murderer, to which he graciously assents. Elvira returns and attempts to tell the others what kind of scoundrel Don Giovanni is. After Giovanni and Elvira depart, Anna confesses to Ottavio that she has recognized the voice of the man who killed her father.

Scene 3—Don Giovanni and Leporello prepare for a party they are to give that night. As the party is about to begin, Masetto accuses Zerlina of being unfaithful to him and she protests her innocence. Don Giovanni then invites Zerlina and Masetto to the party. Donna Anna, Donna Elvira and Don Ottavio arrive attired in cloaks and masks, intending to expose Don Giovanni. Leporello invites them to the party.

Scene 4—Don Giovanni maneuvers Zerlina out of sight of the other party guests. Her screams at his blatant advances draw the others. But the Don protests that it is Leporello who has molested Zerlina. The masqueraders now reveal their identities to Don Giovanni and he flees.

Act II, Scene 1—The Don now embarks on a new conquest: Elvira's maid. Leporello, dressed as the Don, is to lure Elvira away. Don Giovanni, hidden from view, addresses Elvira, with Leporello going through the motions of being the speaker. Elvira descends and tells Leporello (thinking him to be the Don) that she still loves him. The real Don then jumps out, pretending to be a bandit. Leporello and Elvira hurriedly leave. The Don serenades the maid. Masetto and his friends arrive, bent on finding Don Giovanni. They mistake him for Leporello. Announcing to them that he can no longer bear working for such a master, the false Leporello sends the men off in all directions to find the Don, holding Masetto back. The others gone, the Don gives Masetto a sound beating and flees. Zerlina enters to comfort the bruised and battered Masetto.

Scene 2—Later that evening, we find Leporello, dressed in his master's cloak and hat, with Elvira, who is still unaware of his true identity. He then tries to sneak away, but Anna and Ottavio, followed by Zerlina and Masetto stop him. Elvira begs for mercy for the supposed Don Giovanni. Leporello, realizing that they are unmoved by her pleas, reveals his identity, and finally manages to escape.

Scene 3—In a graveyard in which stands a statue of the late Commendatore, Leporello and Don Giovanni discuss the ruse which has just taken place. As the Don laughs, a frightening voice tells him that his end is at hand and orders him not to disturb the dead. Leporello tells his master that the statue of the Commendatore has spoken. The Don orders Leporello to invite the statue to dinner that night. The statue nods its acceptance, and the Don drags his trembling servant away. Donna Anna and Don Ottavio come to visit the Commendatore's grave. Ottavio attempts to console Elvira by expressing the strength of his love. But she responds that her grief is too great for her to feel any other emotions.

Scene 4—The Don and Leporello are enjoying a lavish feast when Donna Elvira bursts in. She begs the Don to repent, but he only mocks her in return. Elvira tries to leave, but is frightened by what she sees in the doorway and rushes off in another direction. Leporello now explores to find what has frightened Elvira; it is the marble statue of the Commendatore. The Commendatore gives the Don one more chance to repent, which he disdainfully refuses. The Commendatore insists, but the Don only grows more stubborn. Smoke and flames begin to rise about Don Giovanni. Ghostly voices summon him to hell. The conflagration grows and Don Giovanni, with a final scream, vanishes in the flames. Shortly thereafter, in the same room, Donna Anna, Donna Elvira, Don Ottavio, Zerlina, and Masetto are told by Leporello what has just occurred. Donna Anna then agrees to marry Don Ottavio after her mourning period has ended; Elvira announces that she will return to a convent; Zerlina and Masetto decide to go home to dinner; and Leporello states that he will find himself a new employer. All six join in a final comment on the wicked life meeting its suitable end.

A warning gong will be sounded in the foyer six minutes before the end of each intermission. A buzzer will signal the end of the intermission.

NEW FONTANA EAST

10th to 18th floors and penthouses
now open for inspection

*Urban living
with a resort outlook*

The Fontana happily combines the lure of city living with the tranquility of nature views. You are "on the Bay", partaking of its ever-changing moods—now misty and mysterious and changing to sparkling blue dotted with white sails and the passage of majestic ocean liners. See the sun rise over the City hills . . . watch spell-bound as the flaming sunset silhouettes the backdrop of Mt. Tamalpais and the Golden Gate. And these views are completely unobstructed and protected.

You'll enjoy too, the lively action on the City's Northern shoreline attuned to the gaiety of San Francisco's most exciting neighborhood, personified by Ghirardelli Square and the gas light charm of cable car park.

Raise your living to a new level, high above the Bay. Penthouses and upper floors of Fontana East are now available for lease and early occupancy. Or you can still buy a cooperative apartment in Fontana West. Shown by appointment.

The Story of "TOSCA"

ACT I—Angelotti, an escaped political prisoner, takes refuge in the church of Sant' Andrea, hiding in a side chapel when he hears the Sacristan approach. Soon after, Mario Cavaradossi also enters to continue work on his painting and when the Sacristan leaves Angelotti reveals himself to Mario, asking his aid. The two are interrupted by Tosca, who jealously accuses Mario of a secret alliance and insists that he has been meeting with a new love. Mario soothes her fears and she leaves, promising to meet him that evening. He then offers to take Angelotti to a hiding place and the two depart as Scarpia and the police enter searching for the escaped prisoner. Scarpia quickly perceives that Cavaradossi has assisted the refugee. When Tosca re-enters, Scarpia, who has secretly resolved to win her himself, insinuates that Mario has departed with his new love, and the enraged Tosca departs.

ACT II—Scarpia, having arrested Cavaradossi, is holding him prisoner in an attempt to make him disclose Angelotti's whereabouts. Tosca, summoned by Scarpia, enters, determined to free Mario. In an attempt to obtain his release Tosca reveals Angelotti's hiding place, but Scarpia informs her that his price for Cavaradossi's freedom is herself. Horrified, but with no alternative, Tosca agrees and the triumphant Scarpia writes the order for Mario's supposedly mock execution and safe conduct. Meanwhile, having noticed a knife on the table, the distraught Tosca takes it, and when Scarpia approaches her she stabs him. Then, snatching the order from the dead man's hand, she flees.

ACT III—Mario and the execution party approach the scaffold where he is to be executed within the hour. Left alone for his last few moments, he is lost in memories of Tosca when she enters to inform him that he has been granted his freedom. Explaining the events of the past evening she tells him that after the mock execution they can flee the city. At that moment the firing squad arrives to perform Scarpia's final bit of treachery. Upon their departure, and when Mario fails to arise at her urgings, Tosca realizes that she has been the victim of a grim ruse. Grief-stricken she leaps from the parapet to her death, just as the police try to arrest her for Scarpia's murder.

A warning gong will be sounded in the foyer six minutes before the end of each intermission. A buzzer will signal the end of the intermission.

The Story of "UN BALLO IN MASCHERA"

ACT I, Scene 1—An assemblage awaits the arrival of Riccardo, the English Governor of Boston. Among the crowd are Samuel and Tom, leaders of a faction which opposes him. Riccardo enters to dispense justice and receive petitions. Oscar, his aide-de-camp, hands him a list of invitations for a ball to be given at the mansion. Seeing the name of Amelia, the wife of his secretary and friend, Renato, among them, he falls into a reverie over this woman, whom he loves. As the crowd leaves, Renato enters. He notices the Governor's gloom and comments on it. Riccardo says that his mood has been brought on by "secret reasons," at which Renato says that he understands. Riccardo is shocked at this reaction, not realizing that what Renato knows is that there is a plot against the Governor's life. Riccardo shows his disdain for the danger he is in. The judge enters to demand Riccardo's signature on a document which would banish the sorceress Ulrica. The Governor asks Oscar's advice on this matter. Oscar makes a mocking defense of her, upon which Riccardo decides that he will personally go, disguised as a fisherman to Ulrica's cave that afternoon for some entertainment. Renato feels this to be too great a risk, but cannot dissuade him.

Scene 2—Riccardo, ahead of his entourage, arrives at the cave to watch Ulrica tell the fortune of Silvano, a sailor. She reads in his hand the promise of a promotion, at which Riccardo slips into Silvano's pocket a note indicating his nomination to the rank of an officer. At this the crowd is filled with amazement at the rapid fulfillment of the prophecy. Then, on hearing that Amelia is about to arrive, Ulrica dismisses the crowd. Riccardo, however, remains behind. Amelia has come to obtain a potion which will rid her of her love for Riccardo. Ulrica tells her that the herbs for this potion must be gathered by the user at a place of execution near the town. Riccardo, in hiding in the cave, overhears and resolves to follow Amelia. After Amelia has left, Samuel, Tom and Oscar enter. Ulrica reads Riccardo's palm and predicts that he will be killed by a friend. When Riccardo asks who his murderer will be, Ulrica replies: the man with whom he first shakes hands. Riccardo asks those present to shake hands with him, but they refuse. Renato then enters and, without knowing what has just taken place, shakes the hand of Riccardo, who then proclaims that this is proof of the foolishness of the prophecy. After all, Renato is his best friend and Ulrica did not even know that her banishment was being discussed that very day.

ACT II, Scene 1—Amelia arrives at the execution place to gather the herbs. Frightened, she falls to her knees to pray and then Riccardo appears. He declares his love, but she asks him to desist. She confesses her love for him. The two, frightened by their own emotions, are interrupted by Renato, who has come to warn Riccardo that the conspirators have surrounded the place. Amelia, who has covered her face, is not recognized by her husband. Riccardo and Renato exchange cloaks and Renato promises to escort the unknown woman back to town without speaking to her. The two run into the conspirators, who, disappointed at finding Renato instead of the Governor, attempt to discover the lady's identity. As Renato tries to defend her, Amelia lifts her veil and reveals her identity, to the amusement of the conspirators and to the dismay of Renato. He agrees to continue to escort Amelia back to the town but also arranges an interview with Samuel and Tom for the following morning.

Scene 2—Amelia protests to Renato that she has not been unfaithful; but he will not be moved. She pleads for permission to see her child once more, and Renato grants it. He then realizes that it is his trusted friend, Riccardo, who should be punished. Samuel and Tom enter to be informed by Renato that he will join them in their plot to kill the Governor. They draw lots to decide who will be the assassin. Amelia enters, followed by Oscar who brings an invitation to a masked ball to be held that night by the Governor. Renato forces Amelia to extract from a vase the piece of paper on which is written the name of the assassin. The lot falls to Renato.

ACT III—Riccardo, convinced that he must separate himself from Amelia, signs an order for Renato's and Amelia's immediate return to England. Then Oscar hands him a note from an unknown woman stating that an attempt will be made on his life. Riccardo pays no attention. At the masked ball, the conspirators are unable to discover whether the Governor is present. Renato finds out from Oscar which of the masked revelers is Riccardo. Amelia, recognizing Riccardo, warns him to leave immediately. At that moment, Renato, who has overheard, stabs Riccardo. Amid the ensuing confusion, Renato is seized by the guests who tear off his mask and demand his death as a traitor. But the dying Riccardo bids them unhand his friend. The Governor vows that Amelia is innocent and as further proof, shows Renato the order for his and Amelia's return to England. Riccardo bids farewell to life, with the remorseful Renato at his side.

A warning gong will be sounded in the foyer six minutes before the end of each intermission. A buzzer will signal the end of the intermission.

Malcolm Starr on "Black & White"

Chic is: "Black & White" in fashion ... and in Scotch. Why? In Scotch the answer is clear. It is character. Character is the basis of good taste. And in "Black & White" Traditional or Extra Light "Black & White," you get the satisfaction found only in the character of "Black & White." This special quality, above all else, is why—the answer in Scotch is as clear as "Black & White."

Introducing the tuned car. 1966 Buick.

What makes a car a car is styling, performance, ride and handling. Only when they're all tuned together is the car a Buick. Like this '66 Riviera Gran Sport.

Every last thing that goes into a Buick—suspension, body mounts, shock absorbers—not only has to work, it has to work with everything else. That's tuning.

Tuning is what we do more of (and care more about) than anybody we know of. And then we go out and test it in more places, too. On roads like the ones you'll be driving on. Why we do it will be obvious when you take your first ride. The tuned car rides and handles as handsomely as it looks. (Tuning may be hard to explain. But it's easy to notice.)

What the tuned car will do for you. And your family. For a start, the new Riviera will comfort you. You'll see that when you slip into the Riviera's new bench seats. Space for six. If you like buckets, they're available, with a reclining arrangement for the right-front passenger. And we have another comforting option available: a new notch-back seat that converts from bench to semi-bucket.

Choosing the tuned car. Visit your Buick dealer. Every Buick you see is the tuned car. Riviera, the new international classic. Riviera Gran Sport. Every '66 Buick.

And with a choice like that, how in the world can you go wrong?

Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?

Architects' drawing of completed War Memorial with new Musical Arts Building behind Opera House and Veterans Building.

Proposition 'B'—An Investment in Excellence

$29 Million for War Memorial Center

Vote 'YES' on Proposition 'B'

Proposition B is a $29 million bond issue on the November 2 ballot. It will renovate the aging Opera House and the Veterans Building and will add a much-needed Musical Arts Building to the War Memorial.

■ A CITY IS MORE than freeways, skyscrapers and cement. A city is heart and heritage and must be vibrant and alive and exciting. San Francisco always has been a city with zest because she has immense beauty; because she is, indeed, a Golden Gate to the world; because she always has been willing to invest in her excellence. Proposition B is such an investment.

■ MANY LEADING San Francisco organizations (see below) concur with the Board of Supervisors, the Planning Commission, Mayor John F. Shelley and the Chief Administrative Officer's Bond screening Committee that Proposition B is imaginative, sensible and, above all, the economical way of satisfying San Francisco's urgent need for improved and bigger cultural facilities. Delay will multiply the cost of construction. Continued deterioration will increase the cost of urgent repairs. Age and earthquake have opened cracks in the 33-year-old Opera House and Veterans Building. Walkways are uneven, plumbing wornout and wiring makeshift. Proposition B is imaginative yet economical.

■ YEARS AND YEARS of effort have gone into planning for the Musical Arts Building and for modernization of the Opera House and the Veterans Building. The proposal was first incorporated in the 1958 Master Plan for Civic Center Development. For the past two years, world-famous architects—Skidmore, Owings and Merrill and Wurster, Bernardi and Emmons—have been at work on plans. They have interviewed War Memorial trustees, building superintendents in the Opera House and the Veterans Building and officials of the Department of Public Works. They have questioned representatives of veterans groups, the opera, symphony, Museum of Arts and others using the center. Their conclusion: "... the Veterans Building and the Opera House need extensive repairs, alterations and modernization ... (There is) a pressing and growing need for a 2,200-2,700 seat hall (and) the production and rehearsal facilities lacking in the Opera House could be combined functionally and economically in an essential new Musical Arts Building." Proposition B fulfills seven years of planning.

Operas of the San Francisco Opera season on

by WILLIAM WEAVER

Verdi wrote Un ballo in maschera reluctantly. He was in his late forties, he was rich (though he would have been loath to admit it), and he had long resented the tyranny of the theatre, with its contracts, its gossip, and its restrictions. The opera he really wanted to write was King Lear, a subject that was to fascinate him all his life; but he wanted to write it at his own pace, without deadlines, and without specific singers imposed on him—a dream he realized at the end of his life, with Otello and Falstaff.

But it was the fall of 1857, and Verdi had a contract with the San Carlo in Naples: a new opera for the '57-58 season. For several years, the composer and a Venetian playwright, Antonio Somma, had been toiling over the Lear libretto, cutting the Shakespearean masterpiece to operatic length, translating the blank verse into shorter, rhyming Italian forms. Verdi was almost satisfied, but he was not satisfied with the singers that the San Carlo had available. The baritone (Coletti) was all right, and so was the tenor, but the women would not do; and rather than write a Lear which would then be performed inadequately, he preferred to write an entirely different opera.

First he offered other alternatives: Simon Boccanegra, not the new work specified in his contract, but he would revise it until it was almost new. The Neapolitans held fast; they wanted a world première.

Abandoning Lear, Verdi cast around for an easier story: Victor Hugo's Ruy Blas was considered, then rejected. "My attention had lingered on a very beautiful and interesting drama: The Treasurer of the King Don Pedro, which I immediately had translated. But as I was making the outline, to reduce it to operatic proportions, I found so many awkward things that I gave up the idea. Now I am outlining a French drama, Gustave III of Sweden . . . It is grandiose, it is beautiful, but this one also has the conventional aspects of all operas—a thing I have always disliked and that I now find unbearable."

And, in the same letter, Verdi tried still another time to get out of writing the opera: "Let us give up the idea of writing an entirely new opera for this year, and in its stead substitute La battaglia di Legnano, adapting it to another story, and adding the necessary numbers, as I did for Aroldo . . ."

The Neapolitans, once again, insisted on fulfilling the contract, so a few weeks later Verdi wrote to his friend Somma, inviting him to his villa at Sant'Agata, where they would settle down to the business of writing Gustave III.

Somma wrote back, declining the invitation to Sant'Agata, but promising to get to work and to have the whole libretto finished by December. But before Somma had gone very far, trouble began for Verdi over the story. Discouraging letters from the San Carlo management arrived, implying that the Censors would be very difficult over a story in which a King is assassinated (thrones were shaky all over Europe, and in Italy especially, in the full tide of its Risorgimento).

"Poor poets and poor composers!" Verdi wrote back, with ironic self-pity, admitting the possibility that, to appease the Censors, the King could be turned into a less offensive Duke (the same kind of demotion that had already taken place to allow Rigoletto to be performed). Verdi could hardly have foreseen the number of changes to which the plot and characters would be subjected; if he had, he might possibly have gone back to Lear, as the lesser of evils.

Meanwhile, scene by scene, the verses arrived from Venice, and as they arrived, they were read and sent back to Somma with detailed suggestions for revision. Like his predecessors, Cammarano, Piave and the others, Somma patiently carried out Verdi's ideas, tightening, smoothing, adding or subtracting, as the music and drama demanded.

Suggestions arrived also from the Naples censors who had at last seen a prose outline of the story. Verdi passed these along to Somma, who wrote: "We are allowed, I am told, all the North, except for Sweden and Norway. But what century shall we choose for the action? I don't know how to find one which, as the censor wishes, justifies the superstition of the sorceress. . . ."

And in another letter a little later, he added: ". . . since it is a question of the North, and it must be a Duke, and a period when the pagan barbarians were fighting Christian civilization, I think it wouldn't be a bad idea to plant it all in Pomerania—a part of Prussia—an independent Dukedom of the 12th century, when the Teutonic Knights were fighting to stamp out idolatry. . . ."

But Verdi, in a letter of November 26th, 1857, objects: "The 12th century seems too remote for our Gustave. It is such a rough, brutal period, especially in those countries, that it seems to me contradictory to put in it French-style characters like Gustave and Oscar, and such a brilliant story, made according to the customs of our period. We should find some prince or duke or devil, even of the North, who has seen something of the world and caught a whiff of the Court of Louis XIV."

But the first thing was to finish the libretto, the verses; names, places could be changed later. And at Christmas time, Somma came to Sant'Agata at last, for the final revisions, supposedly. Early in January, Verdi was to leave for Naples.

What Verdi didn't know—and what the impresario of the San Carlo had carefully avoided telling him—was that the censors were absolutely opposed to Gustave III (or, as Verdi had already prudently rebaptized it, La vendetta in domino). When he did discover the veto, he was both angry and surprised. "I curse the moment I signed this contract," he wrote to a friend in Rome. ". . . I can't understand the reason for the veto on this libretto, which is absolutely the most innocent on earth. . . ."

To Somma his letter was even more aroused, and more detailed:

"I'm in a sea of troubles! . . ."

They have proposed the following changes (as a special favor to me):

- 1) change the protagonist to a private gentleman, with no reference to his being a sovereign of any kind;
- 2) change his wife into his sister;
- 3) change the scene of the Witch, moving it to a period in which they were believed in;
- 4) no ball;
- 5) the murder off stage;
- 6) cut the scene when the name is chosen by lots;

And on and on and on!

As you can imagine, these changes cannot be accepted . . . what an inferno!"

Since Verdi had chosen his librettist and his subject, the responsibility was his; for better or worse, he was supposed to produce an opera of some kind. And the San Carlo management was trying to hold him to it. Management and censors found a poet of their own, who took the bare bones of Gustave and constructed an Adelia degli Adimari, a cluttered story of Guelphs and Ghibellines, which Verdi indignantly rejected, pointing out the absurd inconsistencies, with Oscar changed from page into warrior, Riccardo (or Gustave) disguised not as a fisherman but as a hunter (making his barcarole absurd) and so on.

At one point, tempers flared to such an extent that Verdi was threatened with jail, but at last, he was allowed to leave, score in hand, on condition that he come back the following season, to stage Simon Boccanegra. It was towards the end of April; he had wasted a winter in vain discussions.

The next stop was Rome. A play on the subject of Gustave III had recently been given there, so why not an opera, even if the Vatican's censorship was traditionally more severe than the Neapolitan monarchy's? The impresario of Rome's Apollo Theatre was delighted and promised to arrange everything. But once again there were delays, discussions, suggestions and counter-suggestions. Verdi went on to Sant'Agata. "I will not do in Rome what I refused to do in Naples," he wrote a Neapolitan friend.

But he couldn't allow a completed opera to lie idle in his trunk, and the correspondence between composer and librettist began again. First to go was the title. Vendetta was too strong a word. Una Festa da ballo in maschera was the next choice, but where was the ball to be given? Now Gustave is to be changed into a "Conte di Göthemburg," much to Somma's dismay. But Verdi was, by this time, ready to give in a little. "The Censors would allow the subject, situations, etc. etc., but the locale should be moved outside of Europe. What would you say to North America at the time of the English domination? If not America, some other place. The Caucasus perhaps?"

America it was. And Gustave was finally re-named Riccardo. Even then, however, there was some hesitation about his title, and for a brief period he was known as "Duca di Surrey" before he finally became Conte di Warwick sic, as he is today.

Or as he usually is today. For even now the characters and locale of Ballo are not fixed. In Rome, on the 17th of February, 1859, the locale was Boston—the imaginary Boston of Verdi and Somma—and the same never-never land, where Puritans give masked balls and colonial governors live like kings, is still familiar to most opera-goers.

In America, this locale is made somewhat more anonymous; Riccardo is the ruler of that mysterious country where operas take place. You can call it Boston, or you can call it Spain (if Azucena appeared instead of Ulrica would anyone be surprised?), or Egypt. A few years ago, in Stockholm, a scholarly director decided to turn Riccardo back into Gustave, with unscholarly results. History had been so revised, by Scribe first, then Somma, then the censors, that there was no putting it back together again.

So we must accept the story as it is: Riccardo is a sovereign, he is noble, dashing, warm-hearted and loving. Renato is equally noble, and so is Amelia. That is the tragedy, and it makes no difference in what country—or, pace the composer—in what century it takes place.

Before Verdi had ever thought of Ballo, Bellini had seen the Scribe play and had written about it to his friend Florimo: "A magnificent subject . . . interesting, spectacular. . . ."

Despite his original reluctance, Verdi was obviously inspired with the same enthusiasm for his trio of ill-fated lovers; Ballo is one of his greatest achievements. The "magnificent subject" (read "love") transcended all geographical and political difficulties; it has made its own history.

IT'S YOUR OPERA!

In 1955, when the annual Opera Fund Drive was inaugurated to help to provide a better financial base locally for the art form which is acknowledged to be the most expensive in the world, the opera season in San Francisco was five weeks. This year the season is eight weeks.

Total number of performances per season during the last decade has also expanded, from 43 in 1955 to 69 in 1965. Many outstanding American premiere performances of artists and operas occurred during that period, and many established artists performed important roles for the first time with the San Francisco Opera.

These years have added lustre to the San Francisco Opera's reputation and its position in the first rank of great opera companies of the world. It has come through effort and hard work. The financial burdens of opera, even under the most stringent business practices, are heavy. New assistance must constantly be sought. Those who have never given are asked to donate this year toward our $175,000 Opera Fund Drive goal.

You can help. You are the one who knows that while opera is the world's most expensive art form, it is also the world's most satisfying art experience.

ALMADÉN
California
BLANC DE BLANCS
Champagne

Here is the only Blanc de Blancs champagne produced in the United States. It is made exclusively from the rare, shy-bearing Pinot Chardonnay grape, grown by Almadén at its famed Paicines vineyards in the cool coastal Gavilan Mountains of California. Bottle-fermented in the traditional French "methode champenoise," this 1959 cuvee is a truly historic wine.

WINES OF CHARACTER, DEPENDABILITY & REPUTATION

Established 1861

From the Napa Valley, California's foremost table wine district, come these wines of Character, Dependability and Reputation. They are produced and bottled in the classic manner by wine makers dedicated to their craft.

The winery is open to the public every day (a few holidays excepted). Visitors are welcomed on guided tours and in the tasting room.

Bottles and Bins Recipes, featuring wine cookery and many kindred subjects is available at the winery and at San Francisco book stores.

*1966 Thunderbird:
America's Personal Luxury Car*

Among the world's great luxury cars, only Thunderbird is so completely dedicated to the idea of personal luxury.

For example, among many innovations for 1966, there is a new, more formal Town series with its own distinctive roofline. The classic Thunderbird look, in convertible and hardtop model is still available.

This year, too, Thunderbird leads the way with unique features like a Safety Convenience Panel mounted overhead in the new Town models. This panel warns the driver if a door is ajar or fuel is low, and reminds him to fasten his seatbelt.

A new, more powerful Thunderbird V-8 engine is now standard. Or, if you wish, a remarkable new 428 cubic-inch V-8 is offered as optional equipment. Another distinctive Thunderbird option this year is an AM Radio/Stereo Tape system. You can enjoy over 70 minutes of uninterrupted music with easy-to-load tape cartridges. Also, the 1966 Thunderbird offers a unique automatic speed control to maintain your chosen speed on long trips.

But perhaps the most important of all Thunderbird features is one you cannot see. That is the incomparable engineering and craftsmanship that have made this car a classic in its own time. Let your Ford Dealer show you why Thunderbird is America's Personal Luxury Car.
