COSTLY COMPLIMENT

MR. A: What are you doing up here at the City Hall, Jim? In trouble with the law?

MR. B: No, not so far. I've just been trying to learn something about the law.

MR. A: How so?

MR. B: Well, I guess this is my twentieth visit out here. Dick Roe appointed me his executor, you know. He tried to pay me a compliment . . .*

To name a friend executor of your Will may turn out to be an imposition. And perhaps costly to your heirs, through his illness, absence, or untimely death. Why not investigate the ability of your bank to act as executor? Ask for booklet.
